

THE IMPLICATIONS OF THE LATEST FRAUD research for your organisation

In 2006, BDO undertook the first survey into fraud in the not-for-profit sector. That survey showed some interesting differences between fraud in the for-profit vs. the not-for-profit sectors. Be among the first to hear the results of the second bi-annual survey. Who do you think is most likely to commit fraud? Paid staff? Volunteers? You might be surprised at the answer.

No one likes the idea that fraud could occur in your organisation, but the simple fact is that you are responsible for ensuring that it doesn't. This executive briefing session has been designed to maximize your ability to spot potential occurrence of fraud and minimise the potential that fraud will occur in your organisation, based on the findings of the latest BDO not-for-profit fraud survey. Learn what these results mean to your organisation and the current industry best practice in fraud prevention.

HOW FRAUD OCCURS IN NONPROFITS

The first step in avoiding fraud is recognizing how it occurs in nonprofit organisations – which is different to the way it occurs in corporates. You'll learn:

- Who is most likely to commit fraud?
- Why do they commit fraud?
- What opportunities exist for fraud to occur?

HOW TO AVOID FRAUD IN YOUR ORGANISATION

Fraud can only occur where opportunity exists. What steps should you take to avoid fraud occurring in your organisation? Find out:

- What processes can you use to mitigate fraud?
- What processes are suitable for different sized organisations?

IF FRAUD OCCURS

If fraud has already happened, what steps do you take from here? Find out:

- Who to contact?
- What you need?

SURVEY UPDATE

Since the first survey:

- What areas have improved?
- What areas haven't?
- What trends are starting to appear?

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

These short and sharp sessions offer an update on key topics along with an opportunity to mix and mingle with your peers. They are aimed particularly at Board Members, CEOs and Executives from nonprofit organisations, although other nonprofit staff interested in the topics are welcome.
